Taylor Swift and Brad Paisley have been added to the lineup for the "We're All For The Hall" benefit show.

At his Nashville show this Saturday evening on his Escape Together World Tour, Keith Urban surprised concert goers by announcing his return to the Sommet Center on Tuesday, October 13, 2009, for "We're All For The Hall Nashville," a unique concert benefiting the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum. Keith will be joined by Lady Antebellum, as well as other many special friends and collaborators including Vince Gill, Faith Hill, Jason Aldean, Little Big Town and additional surprise guests to present a one-of-a-kind evening!

Keith's 2009 is already shaping up to be a busy one. A brand new video for his recently released single "Sweet Thing", "Defying Gravity" album released and Escape Together World Tour!

Fifty-eight North American cities, including Nashville, Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, Toronto and Vancouver, will play host to Urban's tour, which will kick off this May, and likely go through the summer and into the Fall.

Critics have hailed Keith as "one of the best reasons in the world to attend a live concert" and have been quoted as saying that "fans would be hard-pressed to find a much better country -- or rock -- show anywhere." One supporting act, either Sugarland, Taylor Swift, Jason Aldean, Lady Antebellum, Dierks Bently, Glen Campbell or The Zac Brown Band will appear at each show.
